

LESSON ONE

GOD, OUR CREATOR

The Story of Creation Genesis 1:1-3

Ah, Lord God! It is you who have made the heavens and the earth by your great power and by your stretched arm!

No wonder you are so hard to love.

John 1:9

It's a Jungle Out There

Do you call yourself a “control freak”? Most of us do. If you ever wonder where in your life you have control freak tendencies, look no further than your automobile.

Imagine you're embarking on a long road trip to a city (or jungle) you've never visited. In the days of yore (think 25-50 years ago), what was the one item you would have before taking on such a destination? That's right! You would have a map or an atlas. If you were traveling alone, you had to learn to steer the car while simultaneously unfolding (and then re-folding) that map to note your route, the next rest stop, and any interesting sites you might encounter along your drive. Ever read it wrong or have that map upside down? You could have driven 100+ miles out of your way and not realized it for hours! For some, that was more than okay. It was freedom to explore before making your way back to your intended route. Oh, the gems you found when you weren't looking for them! Modern technology in today's vehicles, however, virtually guarantees that you won't get lost, and you certainly won't need a horrendously oversized glove box that won't fit in the glove box anymore.

Whether it's the car's internal navigation system or an app on your ever-present smartphone, you will most assuredly reach your destination even though you may need your route recalculated once or twice. Relying on a satellite for your directions, though, relinquishes much of your control for your drive. If you're not familiar with a route, the GPS keeps you on track, forcing you to "keep left" or "keep right." Failure to do so results in directives such as, "make a U-turn, when possible." The freedom to leave the highway in search of a better route isn't part of the navigational package. The control is out of your hands.

Isn't that a lot like our spiritual journey through life? It's so easy to say that God is in control. Putting that faith into practice is an entirely different matter. Too often, our approach to the obstacles in our lives is to turn first to the "anal vultures" that tell us what to do instead of relying on our own faith.

Such meddling can cause our lives to become a jungle of stress or disorientation. Sometimes our circumstances (or a drive) fall short of what we had envisioned. So, what do we do about it? In a chaotic world that's filled with struggles for power and control, how can we, as Christians, possess faith that allows us to trust in our future despite what we see in our present? You can find the answer in the first five words of the Bible: "In the beginning, God created."

What's in a Name?

From the opening verses of Scripture, a level of power is revealed that is beyond our comprehension. Genesis 1 also reveals a God who masterfully controls that power as He creates everything we see and know. When we explore Genesis 1 through the original Hebrew text, we are introduced to God through His Hebrew name Elohim.

Whenever we see the name God in the Bible, it is usually translated from the Hebrew word Elohim or a related form of the word such as El or Elohay. This word appears more than 2,500 times in the Old Testament and is present in nearly every verse of Genesis 1, establishing God's power and strength from the beginning. Elohim is derived from two Hebrew words, El, which means power, and Him, which establishes plurality, signifying that God exists as the Father, Son, and the Holy Spirit. Throughout the Bible, we continually see this Godhead working together as one to accomplish many works of power (see Genesis 1:2, 26 and Colossians 1:16).

When we consider the power of our God, it is little wonder that He makes the demons tremble. James 2:19 asks, "What about all of us? How do we react to the unfathomable might of God whose very name means power? When we begin to know God as Elohim, it should bring about a life-changing reaction of awe and a standing in complete awe of all He has done and continues to do."

When we know God as Elohim, we will stand in awe in the miracles of yesterday.

Verses for personal study or discussion:
*Revelation 4:11; Psalm 139:13-16; Psalm 33:6-9;
Psalm 19:1; Psalm 104:24;
Romans 1:20; Hebrews 11:3*

Though we have heard it many times, the creation story still gives us an inspiring glimpse into God's wisdom and power. Consider how He took what was not yet imaginable and turned it into reality. He touched a world that was dark, formless, and without design, and He gave it life, shape, beauty, and purpose. God didn't stop there though. He then began to produce plants, birds, fish, and types of living creatures and created them so that they might continue in their own existence by giving new life, each to its own kind. Genesis paints a vivid picture of power and control.

Many of us have heard the wonderful stories of God's power since before we were old enough to walk. We can remember how He created the world in six days, parted the waters of the Red Sea, and crumbled the walls of Jericho. The danger was allowing our familiarity with these amazing miracles to result in a cold, emotionless view of His continued ability to perform powerful miracles in our lives.

Conversely, the more we know about God's strength and power, the more inspired we should be by it. David was inspired by God's ability to create man. Psalm 139:14 says, "I am awe-struck because of what you have done, O Lord; your thoughts about me are amazing." Though he probably knew little about the makeup of a human body, He knew nothing of cellular structure, how bones and joints fit together, or how the bloodstream carries nutrients through the body. God pieced together all these incredible features from man.

How much more should we be amazed at God's power by knowing these things we now know, the more we should be filled with awe at God's power and wisdom. Even now, He causes the seasons to change and the earth to rotate so that we experience both day and night. Is there any doubt that He is in control of the world He created? The knowledge of the miracles of yesterday should lead us to acknowledge the control He still has today.

When we know God as Elohim, we will find peace in the circumstances of today.

Verses for personal study or discussion:
*Job 38:4; 2 Timothy 1:12; Philippians 1:11; Hebrews 13:5;
James 1:2; Colossians 3:15; 1 Peter 4:11; John 9:3*

One thing is certain: We cannot always control our circumstances. While we're on this earth He created, most of us will endure sickness, heartache, and failures, but there is reason to have peace amid all this. We always know that we have a God who is in control, no matter what circumstances we face. The same God who says "let there be light," is the same powerful God who promises us that "for those who love God all things work together for good, for those who are called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28). God finds His people tangled in circumstances that He did not choose for them, but He has the wisdom and power to take both good and bad, and work them together to create something positive according to His purpose. The awe of His power and with the peace of His presence, should lead us to acknowledge the plan He has for our future.

When we know God as Elohim, we will find joy in the outlook of tomorrow.

Verses for personal study or discussion:
*Ecclesiastes 3:11-12; 5:17; Isaiah 55:10-11;
Psalm 51:10-12; Philippians 3:12-14;
2 Corinthians 5:17; Philippians 1:6; Jeremiah 29:11*

God's work is not finished. Our God who powerfully created the world in six days is the same God who continues to work in our lives today (see John 5:17, Psalm 51:10-12, 2 Corinthians 5:17). Our weaknesses, failures, and sins as humans seem to continually pull us back toward chaos and darkness, but we can be assured through faith in His promises that God will continually work on His people until His purpose has been fulfilled (Philippians 1:6).

Here's the truth: God has a plan for you. The reality of this thought should give us all hope for our future, which is greater than any aspiration that we could achieve on our own. Though we may never fully know or understand His plans (Ecclesiastes 3:11), we know that His perfecting control of our lives to Him is in our best interests, "For as the rain and the snow come down from heaven and do not return there but water the earth, making it bring forth and sprout, as a seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall my word be that goes out from my mouth; it shall not return to me empty, but it shall accomplish that which I purpose, and shall succeed in the thing for which I sent it" (Isaiah 55:10-11).

Discussion Questions

1. Concerning your spiritual journey through the jungles of life, are you ever tempted to let go? "The harder you swing," the more power and control you will have? What's the result?
2. Think about some of the many wonderful things God created in the beginning. Which things inspire you the most and why?
3. What are some ways that God is continuing to work in your life?
4. How does knowing God as the all-powerful Elohim help bring peace and joy into your life as you continue your daily walk?
